While all across the health industry men are ridiculously the only ones used in clinical trials and studies in the vast majority of cases. Women are kept out, because of the higher number of variables seeming to lead to less reliable results...cutting out a huge chance for a better understanding health and medicine as a species. Despite this...other than heart attacks, women are vastly more likely to seek and attain the appropriate medical care, even though there are several conditions and health risks that are very real for men, drastically affecting the quality of daily life. In this text we will go over herbs that can help prostate problems, erectile dysfunction, infertility, and general heart and circulation support. Elizabeth Summers has been working with herbs and natural medicine for over twenty years, starting by working with friends and family and eventually branching out into the community and the world of medicine out of a profound need to help people. We live in a sick world, and her written work is one way to try to spread the simple but profound health inherent in nature to those who need it. Elizabeth has written on dozens of natural and homeopathic topics, from acute injuries and disease, to diet, pregnancy, and simply trying to thrive in a world of plenty that unfortunately usually leads to dysfunction instead of health.
